

Voluntary withdrawal due to chemical NPEO detected in interlining

Haglöfs maintains strict requirements for chemical compliance throughout its supply chain. In addition to complying with applicable legislation, including the EU REACH Regulation and the California Proposition 65 substances list, Haglöfs applies its own Haglöfs Restricted Substances List \(RSL\), which sets requirements that exceed current legal obligations.

Haglöfs has recently received test results showing elevated levels of Nonylphenol Ethoxylate (NPEO) in the interlining (a stiffening material applied to the reverse side of the shell fabric in areas requiring reinforcement), used in one production lot supplied by one manufacturer during the Spring/Summer 2025 and Fall/Winter 2025 seasons. As these levels exceed both the requirements of the EU REACH Regulation and the Haglöfs Restricted Substances List, the affected products are therefore being withdrawn from the market.

Note that the products remain safe to use, and if you have purchased a product from this list, Haglöfs recommends continuing to use it until the end of its product life and then disposing of it responsibly. In Haglöfs' opinion, continued use is also the most environmentally responsible option as it reduces waste and avoids the additional environmental impact of producing and transporting a replacement product.

If you still prefer to return the product, please contact Customer Service with this Email Contact form. If your product is included in this withdrawal, you will be offered a replacement product of equivalent value where available. If no suitable replacement can be offered, you will receive a full refund upon presentation of your proof of purchase.

About Nonylphenol Ethoxylate (NPEO)

Nonylphenol Ethoxylate (NPEO) is a group of chemicals that have historically been used as surfactants in textile manufacturing. They help improve processes such as washing, dyeing, and finishing by allowing water to spread more effectively over textile surfaces. The substance it degrades into (nonylphenol) can be harmful to aquatic organisms and may persist in the environment. Nonylphenol is also considered an endocrine disruptor, meaning it can interfere with the hormonal systems of wildlife. The primary environmental concern is related to releases from manufacturing processes and wastewater rather than from normal consumer use of finished products.

Affected product list

To be able to return your product, the style number and the production number of your product need to match the list below, these are found in the care label of the product. The style number is shown in green in the image below, and the production number in orange, including year (blue) and season (red).

STYLE NUMBER

PRODUCTION NUMBER;

first 2 digets show year, 25

third diget show season, 1 or 3

last 4 digets shall be 9064
