How did the Fund perform since inception?

The Fund's strategy underperformed the broad-based benchmark, the Bloomberg U.S. 3000 Total Return Index, from inception through April 30, 2026. Underperformance was primarily driven by unfavorable sector allocation decisions, particularly the overweight in the Information Technology sector which failed to deliver strong relative returns despite strong artificial intelligence (AI) related momentum in individual holdings. While individual security selection in technology names generated substantial positive contributions through AI infrastructure demand and strategic partnerships, these gains were offset by poor performance in Healthcare and Software holdings. The portfolio's Industrials overweight provided modest support, but the overall negative security selection across sectors, particularly in Financials and Software, weighed heavily on relative performance during this seven-month period.
