

Clinical Trials: Questions to Consider

Asking questions and communicating with the Principal Investigator and Study Coordinator will help you feel confident in your decision to join a clinical trial. Here are some questions you might want to ask:

- What is the main purpose of this study? _____

- Does the study involve a placebo or another treatment? What is known about the study medication and are any previous study results published? _____

- How long is the study going to last and what will I be asked to do as a participant? _____

- Do I have to pay for any part of the study? Will my insurance cover these costs? Is there any reimbursement for travel costs or childcare? _____

- Will I be able to see my own doctor? _____

- Will I receive any follow-up care after the study has ended? If the study medication works for me, can I keep using it after the study? _____

- Can anyone find out whether I'm participating in the clinical trial? _____

- What will happen to my medical care if I stop participating in the study? _____

- Does the study doctor/investigator have any financial or special interest in the clinical study? _____

- What are the credentials and research experience of the study doctor and study staff? _____
