Time Out says

Given their near-pastel palette and surfeit of faces adorned with sunglasses, these paintings may put you in mind of Hollywood and the dreamscape that is L.A. But the artist behind them, Ridley Howard, is a native of Atlanta, Georgia, who, after sojourns in Boston and Brooklyn, is back to living and working in his home state. Howard combines soft-edged photorealism with geometric abstraction to create cinematically cropped compositions that capture attractive young subjects (male and female) in evocative close-ups.
