A BRIEF OVERVIEW

The founding charter of Cambridge University Press, states that the Press should be employed in "the acquisition, advancement, conservation, and dissemination of knowledge in all subjects."

In this spirit, we have for many years worked to improve the lives of people living in less economically and politically developed parts of the world. We have sent school books, text books, journals and religious texts to schools, libraries and places of worship throughout Africa, Asia, Australasia and the Americas. Now, in the 21st century, we are still firmly committed to providing high-quality educational and research material to the developing world, inspired by our mission to advance learning, knowledge and research worldwide.

We work with several international aid programs to secure sustainable access and use of research for people living in developing countries.

See reverse for a list of the donation schemes that Cambridge books and journals are currently available through. We build strong relationships with the people running each scheme and provide additional training and marketing support to the institutions registered with these programs.

AID AND DONATION SCHEMES

INASP

INASP works with a number of partner countries in sub-Saharan Africa, Asia and Latin America to 'improve access, production and use of research information and knowledge'. Access to the complete Cambridge journal collection is available digitally in 13 countries at a reduced cost.

EIFL (Electronic Information for Libraries)

Over 300 Cambridge Journals are available online to developing countries via the eIFL initiative. This scheme is split between some countries that receive free access to content and others that pay a reduced value.

Research 4 Life

Research4Life is the collective name for four programmes that provide developing countries with free or low cost online access to academic and professional peer-reviewed content.

Scheme	Total Institutions	Number of Titles
HINARI	4832	86
OARE	2870	31
AGORA	2460	37
ARDI	629	57

Journal Donation Project

Journal Donation Project (JDP)

The JDP was launched in 1990 to build archives of journals in countries unable to do so for political or economic reasons. This has been achieved by providing major research and teaching libraries with current, high-quality journals at a discounted rate and in some cases gratis.

Association of Commonwealth Universities (ACU)

The ACU's Low Cost Journals Scheme aims to improve access to journals for its member universities in Africa. Through this, Cambridge journals are available in print form at low cost.

The African Institute for Mathematical Sciences (AIMS)

AIMS is a project to promote mathematics and science in Africa. This support has been through the donation of print books and now a combination of books and journals digital content.

BookAid

BookAid is the UK's leading book donation charity supporting the development of libraries in sub-Saharan Africa. Cambridge regularly provide physical books to this scheme from excess stock. In the last financial year, Cambridge donated nearly 40,000 books.

Author Aid

Cambridge supports AuthorAID, a pioneering program based at INASP that helps researchers in developing countries to publish and promote their work through a combination of training, networking and personal mentoring.
