Comfort sustains; it doesn't erase the pain

Preached by: Gabriel Damalis

Job dares to tell God how much it hurts: "how long until daybreak?" You can come to him like that too, in your grief, because God does not turn away from your lament.

"He will wipe every tear from their eyes" — Revelation 21:4 (NIV)

Comfort isn't about erasing the pain. It's about embracing it and holding it up. Pain breaks you down, it drops you to the ground; and comfort is the friend who slips a shoulder under yours so you don't finish falling. That's what God does through Jesus: he holds you up.

And there's something even more beautiful: what hurts you hurts God too. That's why Jesus weeps when his friends die. God sees your suffering and doesn't leave you alone; he's a Father who stays with you when you cry.
