Whether you're a pre-teen, teenager or young adult, we've got some life hacks for getting organized with money. And while it can be difficult to start being more responsible with money, it's not impossible. In fact, the earlier you learn to keep track of what's coming, what's going out and where it's all going - the better it will be for you and your money goals in the long run.

Think about the things you are most committed to right now.

Do you faithfully watch a favorite TV show? Do you go to practice every week for your favorite sport? Maybe you're committed to helping take care of your younger siblings after school. Take all of that into consideration because the way you feel about showing up for those things is how you want to start to show up for yourself and your money goals.

Prioritizing your needs over your wants is a great starting place.

It's not that you should never have the things you want, but you should always make sure you know what you need, even if your parents are taking care of it for the time being. This allows you to start a financial journey with awareness, instead of being thrown into it without understanding the basics.

DO THIS

- 1. Write out your list of needs and your list of wants. Remember, your needs are things you can't live without: Food, shelter, clothes, etc. Your wants are things that it would be nice to have or experience but they aren't necessities.
- 2. Create a basic budget that helps you to see clearly all the ways you earn money.

Some might be:

- a. Allowance
- b. Birthday money
- c. Part-time job
- d. Summer jobs
- e. Work study
- f. Full-time job

3. Include in your budget all of the things you spend money on. Don't leave anything out. In order to get a true picture of how organized and disciplined you are (or can become) you need to be honest and thorough. Remember, there are pages at the end of this workbook to help you write out these lists.

4. Next, start saving an amount from all the money you receive. Most people start out saving 10%. So, if you get $100 for your birthday, you'd save $10. Or if you make $20 for a night of babysitting, you'd save $2. This helps you to save for emergencies or important things that happen all of a sudden. And it feels so good to know you were responsible enough to save!
