ORDWAY CENTER FOR THE PERFORMING ARTS
345 WASHINGTON STREET | SAINT PAUL, MN 55102

We are obliged to the Dakota people, past, present, and future, who live here and protect this land.

In the spirit of reconciliation, the Ordway will continue to honor our Native and Indigenous communities through the arts.
This visual land acknowledgement is meant to recognize not just the past Dakota people who were forcibly removed from Minnesota, but also acknowledges the present, living, thriving, Dakota people still here in Minnesota. We are the answers to our ancestors’ prayers. We carry their Indigenous knowledge, teachings, and traditions. Finally, a land acknowledgement represents the future Indigenous people that we are leaving this land to steward once we are gone. As Crazy Horse once said, “Upon suffering beyond suffering: the Red Nation shall rise again, and it shall be a blessing for a sick world. A world longing for light again. I see a time of Seven Generations, when all the colors of mankind will gather under the Sacred Tree of Life and the whole Earth will become one circle again.”

History books have written the story of Indigenous peoples from one perspective; the colonizer’s narrative. Images perpetuate the notion that Native people were willing parties in their removal from their traditional homelands. In contemplation of a visual land acknowledgement, Angela Two Stars appropriated the image of the Minnesota state flag. She reimagined that image by identifying what Minnesota (itself a Dakota word) looked like prior to settler’s arrival and the removal of Dakota people.

The first scene represents the original landscapes prior to colonization development and urbanization. It depicts the times when our Dakota ancestors lived in relation with the land; with the understanding that the land was not something to be owned. Dakota ancestors operated with traditional knowledge, language, ceremony, and an advanced understanding of the land and showed gratitude for what the land offered for Dakota survival.

The second scene, at top, represents both the present and future of the Dakota people. This image is a continuation of the teepees (from the first scene) now woven into the Saint Paul skyline and is an acknowledgement that as Dakota people, “We are Still Here”.

The second scene, at bottom, represents the future people gathering under the Sacred Tree of Life and all the colors of mankind coming together to heal a sick world. By acknowledging the homelands of Indigenous peoples, we offer the first steps towards healing.
