WHAT WE'RE READING

OIL & GAS | $1 FOR EVERY $5

"On average, banks and bond investors have recovered only about $1 of every $5 they poured into the U.S. oil companies that eventually went bankrupt in 2015, according to the credit rating agency. That amount is about a third of the money creditors historically have pulled out of drillers who default on their debt. It's slightly less than investors recovered from bankrupt telecom firms in 2002, and 'can only be described as catastrophic,' the credit ratings agency said in a new report."

Fuel Fix | Instapaper

OIL & GAS | ALPINE HIGH

"Apache Corp. said it has discovered the equivalent of at least two billion barrels of oil in a new West Texas field that has the promise to become one of the biggest energy finds of the past decade. The discovery, which Apache is calling 'Alpine High,' is in an area near the Davis Mountains that had been overlooked by geologists and engineers, who believed it would be a poor fit for hydraulic fracturing. It could be worth $8 billion by conservative estimates, or even 10 times more, according to the company."

Wall Street Journal | Instapaper

INFRASTRUCTURE | A SINKING GULF COAST

"From 5,000 feet up, it's difficult to make out where Louisiana's coastline used to be. But follow the skeletal remains of decades-old oil canals, and you get an idea. Once, these lanes sliced through thick marshland, clearing a path for pipelines or ships. Now they're surrounded by open water, green borders still visible as the sea swallows up the shore. The canals tell a story about the industry's ubiquity in Louisiana history, but they also signal a grave future: $100 billion of energy infrastructure threatened by rising sea levels and erosion. As the coastline recedes, tangles of pipeline are exposed to corrosive seawater; refineries, tank farms and ports are at risk."

POWER | ON NRG AFTER DAVID CRANE

"On the edge of a bucolic field in Princeton, N.J., an eco-friendly office building recently opened its doors. Plants festoon the roof, a living wall is planned for the lobby, and rainwater storage tanks supply the building's needs. In the parking lot there are wind turbines, solar panels and electric vehicle charging stations. It is the picture of a sustainable future, one in which society's insatiable demand for electricity can be met without polluting the planet. The same cannot be said of the building's tenant, NRG Energy."

New York Times | Instapaper

ENERGY EFFICIENCY | NUCLEAR, STEP ASIDE

"The combined impacts of these three major energy efficiency efforts since 1990 amount to a remarkable accomplishment in the US electric power sector. We estimate that not only is efficiency our third largest resource, but, more importantly, it has averted the need to build the equivalent of 313 power plants since 1990. We also estimate that efficiency reduced annual carbon dioxide emissions, a major contributor to climate change, by 490 million tons in 2015. We can see further evidence of efficiency's impact in the fact that electricity consumption has flattened in recent years even as the economy has grown."

ACEEE | Instapaper

INFRASTRUCTURE | NEW YORK IS ALSO SINKING

"For the past 15 years or so, Jacob has been primarily preoccupied with a more existential danger: the rising sea. The latest scientific findings suggest that a child born today in this island metropolis may live to see the waters around it swell by six feet, as the previously hypothetical consequences of global warming take on an escalating — and unstoppable — force. 'I have made it my mission,' Jacob says, 'to think long term.' The life span of a city is measured in centuries, and New York, which is approaching its fifth, probably doesn't have another five to go, at least in any presently recognizable form. Instead, Jacob has said, the city will become a 'gradual Atlantis.'"
