What We're Reading

In this Industry Update are a collection of articles focused on IT services trends regarding investing and spending, cloud services, and accounting firms adding managed services to their platforms. The industry is experiencing heightened interest from both strategic and financial buyers, and Harris Williams anticipates this trend to continue as remote work spurred by COVID-19 has accelerated the demand for managed services, cybersecurity, and cloud services. Harris Williams believes that the sector will continue to attract investor interest given favorable tailwinds, a highly fragmented market, attractive recurring revenue models, and increased demand to outsource complex and rapidly evolving technology solutions.

INVESTING & SPENDING IT SERVICE TRENDS

GLOBAL IT SERVICES: AN OFTEN-OVERLOOKED OPPORTUNITY FOR PRIVATE EQUITY

McKinsey & Company

"The $1 trillion IT services market offers many untapped possibilities for private capital."

GARTNER FORECASTS WORLDWIDE IT SPENDING TO GROW 9% IN 2021

Gartner

"Worldwide IT spending is projected to total $4.2 trillion in 2021, an increase of 8.6% from 2020, according to the latest forecast by Gartner, Inc. 'Technology spending is entering a new build budget phase,' said John-David Lovelock, distinguished research vice president at Gartner. 'CIOs are looking for partners who can think past the digital sprints of 2020 and be more intentional in their digital transformation efforts in 2021. This means building technologies and services that don't yet exist, and further differentiating their organization in an already crowded market."

CLOUD SERVICES TRENDS

CAN YOU MEET CUSTOMER DEMAND FOR CLOUD-BASED COMPUTING?

PWC

"A confluence of existing factors driving cloud transition has been further accelerated by the COVID-19 crisis: Cloud spending rose 37% to $29 billion during the first quarter of 2020. This trend is likely to persist, as the exodus to virtual work underscores the urgency for scalable, secure, reliable, cost-effective off-premises technology services."
