

DISTURBANCE REPORT

It's not always easy living as neighbours. Sometimes, the only option for restoring peace in the building is to file a disturbance report. However, we recommend first trying to take up the matter with the neighbour causing the disturbance. It may be that the neighbour does not even realise that his or her conduct violates the Building Rules and Regulations and causes a disturbance. If the situation seems threatening, your first step should always be to call the police, though.

When discussion fails to address the repeated disturbances and you decide to file a disturbance report, please note of the following:

1. The disturbance report must be signed by at least two residents (living in separate apartments) who can testify to the disturbance.
2. The disturbance report must be filed in writing.
3. SATO will not take action if the disturbances are minor and of short duration.
4. A SATO representative, usually the building manager in charge of administrative business, will issue a written warning to the resident in question after receiving the disturbance report. In less severe cases, the resident causing the disturbance may be put on notice. If the disturbances persist, residents must file a new report with the building manager. In the event of disturbances occurring after a warning has been issued, SATO will initiate legal proceedings to rescind the lease agreement. In order to initiate legal proceedings, SATO must be able to prove the disturbance or other grounds for rescission.
5. The identity of those who signed the disturbance report will not be disclosed to the resident causing the disturbance during the proceedings taking place within SATO. The persons who signed the disturbance report must be prepared to testify at any eventual proceedings in court, however.
6. SATO's Building Rules and Regulations are available in several languages at ww.sato.fi/jarjestyssaannot
