Good oral care habits are acquired over time. It is beneficial for children to learn them from a young age!

Even if your child has excellent oral hygiene, their weaker tooth enamel may make them prone to developing cavities. Adding a fluoride mouthwash to their oral hygiene routine can help strengthen tooth enamel so that it is more resistant to tooth decay. In liquid form, fluoride is able to target areas that aren't easily accessed by brushing. In fact, it can even help re-mineralise areas that are beginning to form the earliest stages of cavities.
