PRESS RELEASE

Teréga announces the release of a book by Dominique Mockly: 'Le Pari du gaz'

Dominique Mockly and publisher Débats Publics are releasing a book entitled 'Le Pari du gaz' (betting on gas). Dominique Mockly, the head of Teréga and an expert on energy issues, is transforming the debate on environmentalism and is presenting pragmatic solutions for a successful energy transition.

'Today, the energy debate is limited to a debate on electricity and people forget other forms of consumption. I think that gas has an important role to play in the energy transition because it is a pragmatic solution that already exists and offers many advantages. I firmly believe that, in the future, gas will be a post-transition energy source because it too will have undergone transformation.' Dominique Mockly

Through this book, Teréga's Chairman and CEO offers a daring vision for a European energy policy and dissects the major energy choices made by decision-makers in France and elsewhere in recent years.

He deconstructs common misconceptions about gas and tells about the technological changes making this energy source increasingly 'cleaner'. He demonstrates the urgency of balancing economic performance with environmental responsibility.

LE PARI DU GAZ | DOMINIQUE MOCKLY

Dominique Mockly is the Chairman and CEO of Teréga S.A., a European gas transport and storage company. He is a specialist in the areas of energy, defence, and aeronautics. ## About Débats Publics

Established in 2007, Débats Publics is a publisher that aims to give a voice to leaders who, given their experience and personal beliefs, want to share their reflections on contemporary societal issues.

Through their careers, experiences, and areas of expertise, these leaders have gained knowledge, an ability to analyse, and beliefs that they think are worth spreading today.

The goal for Débats Publics is to provide a platform for these women and men, to promote their dialogue with public opinion, and to create and foster a public debate around the subject discussed by each of these authors.

Débats Publics is dedicated to these 'author-leaders', helping them forge a path for a new society.

About Teréga

Teréga, historically established in south-western France, has over 5,000 km of pipeline and two underground storage sites, representing 16% of France's total gas transport network and 24% of the country's storage capacity respectively. In 2016, Teréga took in revenues of €467 M and had more than 580 employees.

As part of its public service duties, Teréga transports natural gas to more than 400 gate stations under the best-possible conditions for safety, cost, and reliability.
