Teréga announces the release of Dominique Mockly's book: 'La Mondialisation décompressée' (globalisation decompressed)

Dominique Mockly is the author of a third essay published by Débats Publics: La Mondialisation décompressée (Globalisation decompressed). In this book, both pragmatic and proactive, Dominique Mockly provides new insights and practical solutions to all those who wish to reinvent globalisation. By taking an opposite stand to current thinking about negative growth, the Chairman and CEO of Teréga is calling for a new path of globalisation to broaden our scope of action against the unrest and 'compression' within our societies.

"By encouraging us to free ourselves from the excesses of recent decades, 'globalisation unwound' will enable us to refocus on what is essential, with the support of the greatest possible number of people: the quest for sustainable, inclusive and territorial development that will serve the interests of France and Europe, without cynicism or naivety. " Dominique Mockly

The coronavirus crisis, an unprecedented global shockwave, has more than ever exposed the limits of globalisation, accelerating our awareness of the imbalances that are now affecting our planet.

LA MONDIALISATION
DÉCOMPRESSÉE
DOMINIQUE MOCKLY

Contrary to the rhetoric of deglobalisation, negative growth, or the imminence of an inevitable catastrophe, Dominique Mockly demonstrates how we can transform the current conditions of globalisation without depriving ourselves of the tremendous progress it has generated and thus regain control of the spiral of enthusiasm characteristic of recent decades.

« LE PLUS GRAND
CHANGEMENT D'ÉCHELLE
DE NOTRE SIÈCLE »

Dealing with an 'overheated' world by following the path of 'decompressed globalisation', according to its author, will enable us to grow collectively and reach an additional stage of maturity. To achieve this, Dominique Mockly advocates the proactive development of a globalisation that will free individuals, companies and territories from spatial concentration.

Convinced that companies have a complementary role to play with public authorities in this progressive decompression movement, the author thus pleads for improved articulation between the creation of economic value and its territorial contribution.

Dominique MOCKLY is Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Teréga S.A., France's second-largest gas transport and storage infrastructure operator. A specialist in the fields of defence, aeronautics and energy, he began his career in the French Shipbuilding Directorate. After a few years at SAGEM (now SAFRAN) as Director of Avionics and Optronics, he became CEO of TechnicAtome and then Director of International Development at Areva. He is also a lecturer at ESCP Europe and has been the Medef representative on the BIAC Executive Committee since 2014. Dominique Mockly, an expert in business transformation, has written his fourth book (*L'entreprise cerveau.
